What Does CIA Director William F. Buckley Know?

CPYRGHT

Several years ago a man walking his dog in Alley Pond Park on Long Island stumbled across the crumpled form of Povl Bang-Jensen, a former United Nations official who had himself stumbled onto some startling finds in his day. Bang-Jensen, an automatic clutched in his right hand and a suicide note in his coat pocket, was dead.

That was in November 1959, and we had nearly forgotten. The body of Povl Bang-Jensen lay buried in the sod of fresher memories until recently. Then reports began circulating in Washington and elsewhere about the "mental condition" of Lt. Col. Michael Goleniewski, the former Polish KGB official who defected Westward and is said to know where the spies are in our government.

The shade of Bang-Jensen stirred in his grave and we recalled that the same tut-tutting had heralded his demise. We also recalled that some doubts had arisen about the circumstances of his "suicide." And on checking the files, we remembered too that shortly before his death he had, according to friends, "received information of a startling nature" about Communist activity within the United Nations.

If recent reports are true, Goleniewski's information is more startling than anything Povl Bang-Jensen is likely to have uncovered. It is information that affects to an almost unbelievable degree the national security.

Rep. Michael A. Feighan, who interviewed Goleniewski, says the former Soviet agent told him of an into a room with a group of CIA agents for a discussion. One of the U. S. agents looked familiar, and not without reason. The man was one of Goleniewski's own spies.

Goleniewski also told the incredulous congressman that U. S. officials have been remarkably cool toward Goleniewski's offers to point out Soviet operatives now at work inside the CIA and the State Department. CIA officials, Goleniewski says, have advised him that they are "not interested in this type of information." One wonders just what kind of information interests Central Intelligence.

Among the kind that doesn't are those astounding charges by Goleniewski (which, incidentally, is not his real name): That three American scientists having access to defense secrets are in actuality Soviet "plants," that Soviet agents are employed in every important American embassy overseas, and that foreign agents have infiltrated every government agency in this country except the Federal Bureau of Investigation, which manages to handle its security without the help of the CIA.

Mr. Feighan says he is very much agitated over the government's blasé indifference. He also says he is concerned for Goleniewski's personal safety. Protective measures are said to be inadequate at best. Goleniewski, Mr. Feighan says, flatly stated that he feared for his life.

Perhaps Goleniewski has heard what happened to Povl Bang-Jensen. Perhaps not. In any event, the former Polish KGB agent would be wise to turn down any invitations to take a walk in the park.
